Choosing an accountant in Jersey

Jersey has its own tax system and company law, so UK guidance often doesn't apply. These are the points to check. We are a web studio, not tax advisers, so ask Revenue Jersey or an accountant about your own affairs.

Ask which professional body they belong to

We found no Jersey law that licenses accountants or protects the title. Accountancy businesses do have to register with the JFSC for anti-money-laundering supervision, but that isn't a check on the quality of their work.

So ask whether the people doing your work belong to a body such as ICAEW or ACCA, which have their own conduct rules. The Jersey Society of Chartered and Certified Accountants is the local membership society.

Check they can file for you

Revenue Jersey admits approved tax agents, who have authority to prepare and submit returns for other people. Membership of a relevant professional body is one route to approval, so ask whether the firm is approved. Companies can also appoint an agent to file online. Allow 10 working days to change agent close to the deadline.

Know your deadlines

Ask your accountant to confirm in writing which of these they will handle for you.

- Personal tax return: midnight on 31 May on paper, or 31 July online. Late returns cost £300, or the amount of tax if that is less, plus £50 a month after three months.
- Company tax return: midnight on 30 November of the following year, online only. Dormant companies must file too. Late returns cost £300, plus £100 a month after three months, for up to nine months.
- Annual confirmation statement: by the end of February each year, according to law firm Walkers. This goes to the company registry, not to Revenue Jersey.

Does your company need an audit?

Not always. Walkers says a private Jersey company has no audit obligation unless its articles or a shareholders' resolution require one. Public companies must appoint an auditor, and stricter rules apply to market traded companies. Banks, lenders or regulators may ask for audited accounts anyway.

ITIS and paying tax during the year

Jersey doesn't use PAYE. ITIS collects tax from employment income through employer deductions. Self-employed people and others with non-salary income pay differently, so ask how much to set aside. If you work for yourself, try our Class 2 contributions calculator and read our guide to becoming a sole trader.

GST starts at a much higher level than UK VAT

You must register for GST once taxable supplies reach £300,000 in 12 months, or if you expect them to in the next 12. You can register voluntarily below that, and gov.je suggests taking professional advice first. Our GST guide has more detail.

Find a firm that does your kind of work

Some firms on this page work mainly with funds, trusts and international companies, while others look after local businesses and individuals. Before you get in touch, check the firm's website for work like yours, and ask for its fees in writing.

Listings are free and in alphabetical order. Jersey Web is not connected with these businesses unless a listing says so: check details with each business before you book. Guidance checked 4 November 2026.
