Checking and supporting a charity

If you need help now

Our list isn't complete, so if you can't see what you need, try the Association of Jersey Charities' members list or Citizens Advice Jersey. If someone is in immediate danger, call 999.

How to check a charity

Search the public register kept by the Jersey Charity Commissioner. It shows each charity's number, the date it registered and its annual returns. The Commissioner says only organisations on the register can call themselves a charity in Jersey, and it's an offence to falsely claim to be one when asking for donations.

Search with part of a name by adding an asterisk. Names on the register can differ from the name a charity uses day to day.

General and restricted charities

The Charities (Jersey) Law 2014 splits the register into sections. General charities can ask the public for money, and most of their details are public. Restricted charities don't ask the public for money, so the register doesn't show their name: you'll see "RESTRICTED" instead.

Jersey Gift Support

Jersey has Jersey Gift Support, rather than UK Gift Aid. If you're a Jersey resident who pays income tax and you give £50 or more to a Jersey registered charity, it can claim an extra 25p for every £1.

You fill in a form for the charity, and you still list the gift on your tax return. It doesn't cover money collected at events or sponsorship money. If you don't pay Jersey income tax, give directly, as you could owe the tax that's been repaid.

Street collections and appeals

The Commissioner says public collections need permission from the Bailiff and the parish. Groups that aren't registered can still raise money, but they mustn't call themselves a charity. An appeal for a named person doesn't qualify as charitable, because it's a private benefit.

Raising a concern

You can raise a concern about a charity with the Jersey Charity Commissioner, who decides whether to investigate and isn't an appeal body. Try the charity's own complaints route first if you can.

The Association of Jersey Charities

The Association of Jersey Charities represents charities and gives guidance and grants, with over 250 members. It isn't the regulator, so being a member isn't the same as being on the public register.

Listings are free and in alphabetical order. Jersey Web is not connected with these businesses unless a listing says so: check details with each business before you book. Guidance checked 4 November 2026.
