Charity, club and community website design in Jersey

Share your cause, bring people together and keep your members in the loop.

Clubs and charities run on goodwill and small budgets. A website should not eat into either. It should make the committee's job easier and help the cause reach more people across the island.

Clubs and charities run on goodwill and small budgets. A website should not eat into either. It should make the committee's job easier and help the cause reach more people across the island.

We build a clear home for your group, with news, events and member information in one place, and we keep it running so volunteers can focus on the work that matters, not the tech.

WHO IT'S FOR

Charities, sports clubs, societies, associations and community organisations in Jersey.

Why it matters

One home for everything

News, events, membership and contact details in one tidy, easy-to-find place.

No burden on volunteers

We handle the technical side so the committee never has to worry about it.

Built for the island

Designed around what Jersey members and supporters need to find quickly.

WHAT'S INCLUDED

- ☐ News and events pages
- ☐ Membership or sign-up information
- ☐ Donation link or contact form
- ☐ Photo galleries
- ☐ Committee or team page
- ☐ Sponsor or partner logos
- ☐ Mobile-friendly layout
- ☐ Secure hosting and SSL

How it works

1 Tell us about your cause, events and members

We talk through what your group does, who it serves and what information people need to find: from joining details to upcoming fixtures.

2 We design a clear, welcoming home for your group

A site that reflects your colours and identity, with space for news, events, galleries and whatever else your community needs.

3 We launch and take care of the maintenance

Send us updates and new photos when you have them. We handle the rest so your committee can focus on running the club.

The Jersey rules a charity or club website should respect

Registering as a charity in Jersey is voluntary, but it decides what you can call yourself. Under the Charities \(Jersey\) Law 2014, a Jersey organisation that is not on the Charity Commissioner's register must not describe itself as a "charity", and "Jersey charity" is reserved for registered charities run mainly from the island. Registration also unlocks the tax reliefs. The public register shows your registration number, so we put it in the footer, where a donor can check it in seconds.

Online raffles and prize draws are regulated by the Jersey Gambling Commission. Lotteries with prizes of £1,500 or less, no more than three a year, are exempt. Bigger ones need a registration, and those over £12,000 an event or £30,000 a year need a permit. Selling tickets online is allowed: for registered lotteries the Commission recommends checking buyers are 18 or over and live in Jersey, permit lotteries must verify both with ID software, and in every case the terms and conditions should be easy to find, the registration or permit number shown, and the advertising never aimed at children.

Street and house-to-house collections need permission from the Bailiff and the Parish, and what you say about where donations go has to be accurate. Like any organisation that holds members' details, you also need to register with the JOIC. Registered charities do not pay the fee, and the JOIC can confirm whether a club qualifies for the same exemption.

Clubs that work with children have one more job. Jersey Sport recommends a named welfare officer, a safeguarding policy and reporting procedure, DBS checks for coaches and volunteers, and rules on photographs and social media. Put the welfare officer's contact and the policy on the website, where parents look for them, with the route for reporting a concern: the Children and Families Hub on 01534 519000.

Common questions

Do you offer a charity discount?

Yes. Jersey charities and not-for-profit groups get a discount on our work, and we confirm your price in writing before anything starts. Charities can also get a free .org.je domain from the Channel Isles registry.

We are run by volunteers. Is it hard to maintain?

No. We look after the site for you. Email or WhatsApp us updates whenever you have them and we take care of the rest. No technical knowledge needed.

Can we take donations online?

Yes. We can link to your existing donation platform, or point visitors to a payment method that works for you.

Can we list upcoming events?

Yes. An events page is easy to include and we can update it whenever your committee has new fixtures, fundraisers or socials to publish.

Can we embed social media feeds?

Yes. If your group is active on Facebook or Instagram, we can pull in recent posts so the site stays current without extra work.

Can we call ourselves a charity on the website?

Only if you are on the Jersey Charity Commissioner's register. For a Jersey organisation, using the word "charity" without being registered is an offence. Clubs and societies that are not registered can describe themselves as not-for-profit or community groups instead.

Can we sell raffle tickets through the website?

Yes, within the Jersey Gambling Commission's rules. Small lotteries are exempt, larger ones need a registration or a permit, and online sales need age and residency checks, clear terms and conditions and your registration or permit number on show.

Talk to us about your website

Builds start from £100 depending on the job, and hosting is from £20 a month. We confirm your price in writing before you commit.
