Most small businesses in Jersey do not need a large website. They need a clear one: what you do, where you work, why people can trust you and how to get in touch. Built to that brief, a website does not have to start in the thousands.

Our builds start from £100. The smallest sites cost the least, and the price rises with the number of pages, features such as an online shop or bookings, and how much writing and photography is involved. We work out what your business needs, confirm what is included and tell you the price before you commit. Hosting is from £20 a month once the site is live.

1 Tell us about the business

Apply with a few details: what you do, who your customers are and what you want the website to do.

2 We confirm the scope and the price

We suggest the smallest site that does the job, list what is included and tell you the price for the build.

We build the site and take it live. Hosting is then from £20 a month, covering security, backups and updates.

How to compare a website from £100 with other quotes

Website quotes are hard to compare because they include different things. Before you choose, put every quote through the same four questions.

What happens after launch? A low build price with expensive or unclear hosting can cost more over a few years than a higher build with fair hosting. Ours is from £20 a month, and the page explains what that covers.

Who owns the site? Check that the domain is registered in your name and that you keep your content if you leave. Some monthly website deals keep both.

Who looks after it? Websites need security updates, backups and the odd fix. Find out whether that is included or charged every time.

What exactly is included? Ask how many pages, whether a contact form and mobile layout are included, and who writes the words. Our guide to website costs in Jersey lists the costs people forget to budget for.

Common questions

What do I get for a build from £100?

Our builds start from £100, for the simplest sites. What your site needs decides the final price: the number of pages, any features such as an online shop or bookings, and how much writing and photography is involved. We confirm what is included and the price before you commit.

What makes the price go up?

More pages, features such as an online shop or bookings, and extra work on words and photos. Optional extras such as local SEO or copywriting are priced separately and only added if you want them.

Are there any other costs?

Hosting is from £20 a month once the site is live. It covers the server, SSL, backups, security, updates and a person to contact. Your domain name is separate and registered in your name: a .je is £49 a year direct from the registry, and registrars set their own prices.

Is a cheap website good enough for a business?

It is if it does the job customers need: says what you do, where you work and how to reach you, loads quickly and works on a phone. A low price should mean a smaller site, not a worse one.

Do I own the website?

You own your content and your domain name, and there is no long contract. If you ever move on, your words, photos and domain go with you.

How is this different from a website builder like Wix?

A builder is cheaper to start but you do the design, writing and upkeep yourself. With us the site is built for you and hosting includes maintenance. Our guide compares the three-year cost of both.
